Respectfully, I see a few problems with the Proposed Final Judgement in the Microsoft Antitrust Case:

The Proposed Final Judgement doesn't take into account Windows-compatible competing operating systems;

The Proposed Final Judgement Contains Misleading and Overly Narrow Definitions and Provisions;

The Proposed Final Judgement Fails to Prohibit Anticompetitive License Terms currently used by Microsoft;

The Proposed Final Judgement Fails to Prohibit Intentional Incompatibilities Historically Used by Microsoft;

The Proposed Final Judgement Fails to Prohibit Anticompetitive Practices Towards OEMs;

The Proposed Final Judgement as currently written appears to lack an effective enforcement mechanism.

Thank you,

Andrew J. McKenzie
